

FACULTY OF HUMANITIES

The University of Latvia is the country's leading and most influential higher education and research institution.

The Faculty of Humanities of the University of Latvia fosters internationally competitive research and higher education in the humanities, promoting intellectual growth, critical thinking, cultural awareness in society.

The Latvian Environmental Humanities Network (LENH)

LENH gathers more than 20 researchers from a range of disciplines, including philosophy, geography, literary studies, the arts, anthropology, history, and archaeology, as well as theology. It is dedicated to the development of environmental humanities (EH) in Latvia, building interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary collaborations, incorporating our environmental humanities into a wider framework of regional and international research.

Contacts:

@ Dep. of Philosophy and Ethics,
Faculty of Humanities, UL
Associate Professor
Artis Svece,
artis.svece@lu.lv

@ Dep. of Philosophy and Ethics,
Faculty of Humanities, UL
Associate Professor
Anne Sauka
anne.sauka@lu.lv

@ Dep. of Geography, The Faculty of Science and Technology, UL
Associate Professor Anita Zariņa
anita.zarina@lu.lv

@ Institute of Literature, Folklore and Art, UL
Leading Researcher Dace Bula
dace.bula@lulfmi.lv

Looking for partnerships in:

- human-animal relations and multispecies solidarity;
- environmental histories, memories, and imaginaries;
- environmental philosophy and ethics of care;
- environmental activism in Eastern and Northern Europe;
- environmental knowledge and epistemic justice;
- embodied and experiential methods and engagements with the environment;
- situated and storied approaches.

Key activities:

- Joint interdisciplinary research activities;
- International and national conferences, seminars, and workshops;
- Development and teaching of EH study courses;
- Public outreach and promotion of EH.

ENVIRONMENTAL HUMANITIES

PHILOSOPHY

HISTORY

LITERARY STUDIES

GEOGRAPHY

ANTHROPOLOGY